Keynote:

Christopher B. Granger, MD, FACC, FAHA, FESC

Dr. Christopher Granger is a Professor of Medicine in the Division of Cardiology at Duke University and immediate past Director of the Cardiac Care Unit for the Duke University Medical Center. He is past chairman of the AHA Mission: Lifeline program and the American Heart Association Acute Cardiac Care Committee, as well as serving on the AHA scientific publications committee. He is a member of the ACCF/AHA STEMI Guidelines Committee and the AHA/ACC/HRS Guideline for the Management of Ventricular Arrhythmias and the Prevention of Sudden Cardiac Death. Dr. Granger's primary research interest is in the conduct and methodology of large randomized clinical trials in heart disease. He has coordinated the Duke Clinical Research Institutes' activities in many clinical trials evaluating treatments of acute MI, of heart failure, of antithrombotic strategies in acute coronary syndromes, and of stroke prevention in atrial fibrillation. He is co-director of the Reperfusion of Acute MI in Carolina Emergency Departments (RACE) projects, North Carolina state-wide programs to improve reperfusion care for acute myocardial infarction and care for cardiac arrest. He is principal investigator of the RACE-CARS NHLBI cluster randomized trial testing interventions to improve survival from cardiac arrest in North Carolina. He is PI of the COORDINATE-Diabetes cluster randomized trial of improving care of diabetes and cardiovascular disease. He is co-PI of the RENAL AF trial, the QUANTAM AF cluster randomized trial and the IMPACT-AFib randomized trial, aiming to demonstrate how to improve use of anticoagulation for stroke prevention in atrial fibrillation.
